

Accounting I

Study Guide

- A Bondholder of a Corporation
- Accrual Based Accounting
- Advantages of a Partnership
- Allocation Of Miscellaneous General Expense
- Areas of Accounting
- Authorized Capital Stock
- Bank Service Charge on a Bank Reconciliation
- Bases for the Allocation of Miscellaneous General Expense
- Calculating the Cost of Land
- Calculating the Principal of the Note
- Calculations
 - Cash Flow Statement
 - Interest
 - Return on Assets
 - Gross Profit
- Causes for a Balance Sheet Columns of a Worksheet to be Off
- Classifying a Note Receivable Due in Less Than Six Months
- Computing Return on Assets
- Cost of Land
- Departmental Cost Analysis
- Depreciation Definition
- Primary Objective of Fundamental Accounting
- Recording the Cost of Installing a Sewer Line
- Result of Forgetting to Count a Portion of Goods in a Warehouse as Ending Inventory
- Disadvantages of Computerized Accounting Information System
- Effect of a Stock Split
- Employee's Individual Earnings Record Information
- Errors that Appear in a Trial Balance
- External auditing
- Financial Statements for a Sole Proprietorship
- Forms of Revenue
- Information on an Employee's Individual Earnings Record
- Inventory Classification
- Items that Cause a Difference Between the Bank Balance and Book Balance
- Journal Entry When Good are Sold for Cash
- Journalizing the Cost of Installing Sewer
- Limited Partnership
- LLC
- Managerial Accounting
- Net Income and Amount of Owner's Withdrawal
- Note Classification
- NSF on a Bank Reconciliation
- Posting a Stock Dividend
- Result of Net Income Less than Amount of the Owner's Withdrawals
- The Accounting Equation
- Types of Depreciation
- Types of Dividends
- Types of Inventory Systems
- What Effects Working Capital
- Which Accounts Require a Closing Assets
- Which Assets are Depreciated